THE ROLE OF INTERNATIONAL NON-GOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATIONS IN MODERN POLITICAL PROCESSES

Modern political and social interaction presumes participation of international non-governmental organizations as well as national governments. INGOs due to their activity usually in a very specific area may possess relevant information for decision making process. To make the activity of the INGOs more efficient co-operation with the national governments is needed. But the issue is that the INGOs that work specifically in Russia get financial aid from governmental structures of Western countries, and their policy considers implementation of Western democratic patterns of interaction in non-Western country. Thus, author asserts that the democracy differs from society to society and whilst implementing democratic institutions national history and culture is to be considered.
