POLITICAL MANAGEMENT IN THE CONTEXT OF THE NATIONAL SECURITY PROBLEM IN RUSSIA

In the context of sanctions renewal the role of the political management in Russia has become important more than ever. Being a relatively new topical field of study it includes several main models that determine the "style" of policy making. The general take on the current Russian government policy observes the progress in the terms of scenario and cost-based models. In addition to that it is necessary to acknowledge the absence of the structural and functional state management philosophy. However plain bureaucracy restructuring and political reforms are unable to supersede the ideological matrix that exists in the society and forms the basis of the political system. The only promising way out is formulating new and timely ideologemes compliant with civil society values. Their key provisions should imply the final Russia stance on its past, Euroasian integration as well as reasonable estimate of significance of life support systems and social protection.
